Fall 2016 Offered Courses

ENC 3250 Professional Writing
T/R 10:30-11:45AM | 1:30-2:45PM | WWW
This class will help prepare you for the workforce by introducing you to genres, writing, and project skills necessary in the professional world.

ENC 3250H Professional Writing for Honors
T/R 9:00—10:15AM
This class will help prepare you for the workforce by introducing you to genres, writing, and project skills necessary in the professional world.

ENC 3311 Essay as Cultural Commentary
M/W/F 12:30-1:20PM | WWW
Fine-tune your essay skills by creating texts that draw attention to and comment on current cultural issues.

ENC 3315 Argumentative Writing
M/W 2:30-3:20PM | T 1:30-2:45PM
Refine your writing style by studying and engaging in various techniques and strategies for evaluating and building arguments for various audiences.

ENC 3331 Rhetoric & Civic Engagement
M/W 11:30-12:20PM | M/W 1:30-2:20PM | T/R 9:00-1:15 | T/R 9:00-10:15AM
Investigate the relationship between rhetoric (the art of persuasion) and civic engagement, explore how writing shapes civic identities, and practice specific rhetorical engagement skills.

ENC 3335 Writing for Publication
M/W 9:30-10:20 | WWW
Taught by a published writer with industry experience, this class explores the publishing industry and how to write for and market your work to specific print and online publications.

ENC 3373 Cultural Rhetorics
T/R 3:00-4:15PM
Learn about the range of cultural rhetorical tradiations and practices and examine how cultural forces impact the diverse rhetorical practices of individuals and communities.

ENC 3375 Rhetoric in Popular Culture
T/R 9:00-10:15AM
Special Topic: Fantasy Football
Learn how Final Fantasy leagues and sites function as communities, build argument analysis and other skills useful in a range of fields and situations.

ENC 3417 Literacy and Technology
M/W 3:30-4:20PM
Extend your knowledge of literacy theory and study how technology, particularly new media technology, has changed our current intellectual, professional, and personal theories of literacy, writing, and technology itself.

ENC 3502 Researching Writing and Literacy
M/W/F 9:30-10:20AM
Study various strands of and methodologies for writing and literacy research in this core course for the Writing and Rhetoric major.

ENC 4212 Professional Editing
T/R 10:30-11:45AM | WWW
Learn and practice strategies for various levels of print and online editing important for writers in any career, but especially for those in the publishing/editing industry.

ENC 4275 Theory and Practice of Tutoring Writing
T 6:00-8:50PM
Do you have strong writing and communication skills and want a job as a peer tutor in the University Writing Center? Have your writing and rhetoric teacher recommend you via email to the UWC Director for this permission-only tutor-training practicum course.

ENC 4353 Writing for Social Change
R 12:00-1:15PM
Learn about the roles of writing in social change efforts that utilize a range of models and strategies (e.g., grassroots activism, organizational sponsorship, political action). After tracking and studying a current problem or issue with local implications, students will work with community stakeholders on writing projects that address this problem in potentially sustainable ways.

ENC 4354H Writing with Communities and Nonprofits
T/R 13:00-2:45PM
Learn and practice methods for writing in partnership with nonprofits and the multi-stakeholder communities they serve, with emphases on audience analysis and on community literacy and engagement. Typically includes a service-learning project.

ENC 4374 Gendered Rhetorics
M/W/F 2:30-3:20PM
Investigate gendered rhetorics in a variety of contexts and historical traditions, focusing on how women rhetors have adapted rhetorical strategies as they engage in and shape public conversations.

ENC 4379 Writing and Rhetoric Capstone
T/R 12:00-1:15
Reflect on disciplinary identity, possible career trajectories, and transferable strategies for writing in your life in this culminating course for the Writing and Rhetoric major. Course has several pre-reqs.

ENC 4416 Writing in Digital Environments
M/W 12:30-1:20PM
Blog, tweet, and web code your way toward a deeper understanding of the rhetorical context of digital environments. Learn strategies for critiquing, composing in, and improving digital writing genres and networks.

ENC 4416H Writing in Digital Environments for Honors
M/W/F 12:30—1:20PM
Blog, tweet, and web code your way toward a deeper understanding of the rhetorical context of digital environments. Learn strategies for critiquing, composing in, and improving digital writing genres and networks.

ENC 3883 Marketing Your Writing
WWW
Explore writing markets and publishing opportunities therein, the submission process, and author marketing and negotiation strategies.

ENC 4944 Writing Internship
WWW
Gain training and practice in professional and/or civic writing through an approved internship with a business or organization. Involves reporting and reflecting on experience. This class is taken with permission only from Dr. Pavel Zemliansky.

ENG 3836 Professional Lives & Literacy Practice
T/R 3:00-4:15PM
Learn and apply literacy theory in exploring technology-assisted professional writing and communication practices around knowledge management work in organizations and communities.

LIN 3673 Rhetorical Grammar
M/W 10:30—11:20AM
Refine your application of grammatical conventions and polish your writing skills, particularly regarding clarity of action, cohesion and coherence, rhythm, and figurative language.